Some drivers insist on doing foolish stunts day in and day out although they know better. Some of these stunts are staged during the worst kind of weather.

One night during a severe thunder storm when driving conditions were bad, rain was falling in torrents, and visibilty was poor, driver after driver passed me on curves and hills.

Hurry to get home, worry over open windows and curtains get ting wet, and fear that the new carpet would get soaked by the rain-these and many other silly reasons are frequently given for the haste and violation of all traffic rules which endangers the Word has been received here of drivers' lives as well as the lives

Indians Credit Dunes to

Giant Breed of Turtles Indian legends include a Paul Bunyanesque story of the origin of the sand dunes of Lake Michigan.

Shortly after the glacier retreated after gouging its way down over Michigan two large turtles, as tall as a ten-story building, emerged from the big lake near St. Joseph. They found the smooth sandy beach much to their liking and ranged as far south as New Buffalo in search of food, reveals a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

The swale near New Buffalo was the place they turned around on the south end of their trip and the David was the turntable for the oth-

They mated and buried their ages in the warm sand to hatch. When they returned they discovered that the nest had been broken into and the eggs eaten by bears. The next nest of eggs they buried under a great mound of sand, the first dune, and then, surveying their handiwork, decided that the pile of sand would certainly lead any marauders right to the eggs. So they built several decoy mounds.

As time went on their offspring built more and more mounds to hide their eggs, and so the dunes from into being.

But food became more and more scarce and the turtles became smaller and smaller, until the land turtle, about the size of a man's hand, was all that was left.

In support of the Indian legend was the discovery near St. Joseph. little more than a hundred years

Once it was believed ventriloquists produced voices in their stomachs. Hence their title, from two Latin words meaning "belly speakers." Actually they form words in the usual manner but with special control of breathing throat, mouth, lips and tongue. Anyone with healthy vocal organs can learn the trick, asserts a writer in the Washington Post. Ancient people were masters of ventriloquism. Through the art, it's believed, they made their statues of pagan gods speak.

Roger Williams Refused

To Yield to Persecution Refusing to submit to the religious persecution of early Seventeenth century days in England, Roger Williams, a young Puritan minister, came to the New England colonies.

Even here, however, he found an absence of the freedom which he sought and his years of preaching in the Salem settlement of Massa-chusetts were marked by his open opposition to "compulsory taxation to support the church, the forcing of people to drop everything and go to church every time the town bell He protested, also, the acrang." tion of the English crown in giving away land which he contended rightfully belonged to the Indians.

The persistency of Williams in teaching this strange new doctrine aroused the indignation of leaders of the Salem settlement and evenmally resulted in Roger being banished from the village, relates Les-lie Hartley in the Washington Star. Leaving hastily without his family Williams headed south to a refuge with his friends, the Indian tribe called the Narragansetts, who lived along the shores of the bay named after them.

Here he continued his preaching and was joined by his family and a few friends, the little colony buying land from the Indians. In 1644 Williams obtained a charter from England and the settlement of Providence became known for its tolerance and freedom from religious Eventually it became bigotry. known as the state of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, smallest, but one of the most independent states in the Union.

'Mad Anthony' Wayne Is

Buried in Pennsylvania Although Pennsylvania has two graves of "Mad Anthony" Wayne, he still remains a shadowy figure of the Revolutionary war to many Americans. History writers in the main have failed to provide many details about him, notwithstanding the fact that he was one of Washington's most colorful generals.

He was the son of a Chester coun ty farmer and lies buried, officially, in Old St. David's churchyard, De von, observes a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer. Not far away is the land his father tilled. Still closer is the community which bears land is the Waitomo cave in the province of Auckland. It is rich in stalactite and stalagmite formations, and is lighted not by naked lights or electricity, but by millions of glowworms, says London Tit-Bits Magazine. Hundreds of people visit the cave every year for a glimpse of this amazing sight, for the insects line the roof and do not twinkle. Silence is enforced, as the noise of speech has the effect of making them switch off-a natural protective instinct. Glowworms and fire-flies are, of course, plentiful in all tropic regions, where it is sometimes possible to read a newspaper by the light they give. In India "shikaris" (hunters) often stick them on the foresight of a rifle for night shooting.

Gaspe is reputed to be the oldest known part of North America and historians say it had been visited by adventurous white men from Ice-land and Greenland as early as the Twelfth century. Many parts of the coast are noted for their rugged grandeur and one of the scenic mar-vels is the giant rock at Perce, where the herring gull and the cor morant breed and have bred for hundreds of years. The birds of this part of the Gaspe coast are a study in themselves.

Kind of Feet on Birds

Told by Their Habits One can tell the kind of feet a particular bird has by knowing his babits. For the feet of birds are almost as important to them as their wings, writes a St. Louis Globe-Democrat correspondent.

The duck's feet are webbed because it must have good paddles to push the water when it swims. Otherwise, it would be as poor a swimmer as a hen.

The robin has a foot-much like the ordinary chicken. His foot has three toes in front, the center one a little longer than the others, and a rather long, strong toe behind. Because he scratches for most of his food, his front toes are fitted with sharp toenails which can tear at the hardest ground. The back toe is held reserve, for when a cat or any other annoying enemy comes along, the robin is obliged to abandon his search for worms and cling to a safe, high branch.

Woodpeckers have two toes in front and two behind. Consequently they hobble awkwardly on the ground, like some old man with corns on his feet. But in the trees. where they're reasonably comfortable, they're quicker than almost any other bird at hanging to the skinniest branches and getting through the thickest leaves.

The cassowary and ostrich, tall birds that are surpassingly good runners, have the strangest feet of any. The foot of the ostrich has two toes. He hasn't any use for the back toe because he doesn't climb trees. And for running, the back toe would be just so much extra luggage. Both of these runner birds live in Australia.

No matter where they live, nor what their difficulties, the bodies of animals learn marvelously to meet the needs of their lives.

Fort Henry's Gun Story

Has Been Proved Untrue What once was a good story to tell to visitors in Kingston, Ont., was definitely scotched by the hand of research.

A legend once circulated that the guns of old Fort Henry, built in 1837, point toward their native Canada instead of toward Lake Ontario and the enemy all because of a mistake. This slip-up, so the story went. was made by an English engineer who sent the plans of the fort at Kingston, Jamaica, to Kingston, Ontario, vice versa. Hence when the fort was built according to plan. the guns were found to have turned traitor, states a writer in the Boston

Restoration of the fort, while adding to the interest of the landmark, completely destroyed this fiction. Researchers announced that the guns faced inward, not through any error, but because they were placed in reverse fire chambers to rake attackers caught in the inner most.

This type of defense is the only one of its kind in America, but its value was never tested. Fort Henry, like the $3,000,000 citadel beside the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, 370 miles away, was never used because of the lasting peace between the United States and

Johnny Appleseed a Missionary For years the story of Johnny Appleseed has lain dormant in many minds. Born John Chapman in 1774, he wandered over the Middlewest, especially in Indiana and Ohio, scattering apple seeds wherever he found a fertile spot and returning later to prune the trees into which they grew. Betimes he acted as missionary, friend and "medicine man" to white settler and Indian alike, reading the Bible to all who would listen, giving ad- the things that are real vice and doctoring with simple remhis shirt was generally a coffee sack, his hat often an inverted-cooking tin. The British Royal Family

George III of Great Britain had a family of 15 children, including 9 sons and 6 daughters. The sons were George, who became George IV: Frederick, duke of York; William, duke of Clarence, who became William IV: Edward, duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria; Ernest duke of Cumberland, afterwards king of Hanover; Augustus, duke of Sussex; Adolphus, duke of Cambridge; Octavius and Alfred, who died in infancy. The daughters were: Charlotte, who married the king of Wurtemburg; Augusta; Eliz-abeth, who married the Landgrave of Hesse-Homburg; Mary, who mar-ried the duke of Gloucester; Sophia.

Mrs. Morley, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Bromley and Mrs. Whitman were the ladies of the party. We should say gay party for it was all of that, especially on Satur-day when Mr. Bromley decided it would be a fine day for a river Mr. and Mrs. Morley, Mrs. Bromley, Mrs. Whitman, Mrs. Thompson and Mr. Bromley started for McMasters bridge in two canoes. They had their lunch with them so just eased along down the AuSable, enjoying the beauties of nature but forgetful of clouds overhead, until the rain reminded them that all is not sunshine. Before they were entirely soaked thru, they man-aged to crawl under some tables and their canoes. This Mr. Bromley said was fine until the tables began to leak.

Having ordered two cars to meet them around three o'clock, they of course expected to be at the bridge by that time, however, they arrived at five o'clock, very wet, but all smiling.

On Sunday, everyone of the party were quiet and apparently enjoying a peaceful Sabbath. when Frank Bromley became restless; this was nearly five up the river, longingly, and then put the proposition up to his guests, it was nothing less than another river trip. This time Mr. Bromley wanted to haul the party and canoes upstream and float
